

GOVERNANCE STRESS TEST

PURPOSE

A stress test serves two purposes. Firstly, it shows you where your company or institution's governance stands in relation to common high-impact events. Secondly, it creates an opportunity to make suggestions for establishing corporate governance practices that are acceptable to all the stakeholders involved.

Proper governance is about more than complying with the articles of association and regulations: it is a tool for making a future-proof company, in which every stakeholder is heard and plays their part.

"A stress test gives the management and supervisors the tools to safeguard a lasting and future-proof governance structure for the company's benefit."

Marry de Gaay Fortman | Partner Governance

TAILOR MADE

Each stress test is designed according to the company or institution's specific situation. In general, however, it will include the following steps:

- Inquiry (risk assessment), including talking to the stakeholders involved
- Recommendations/advice based on various case studies
- Formalisation/implementation
- Maintenance/continuation
